

Grief and loss

People can experience grief and loss in a variety of ways after an amputation. Any feelings of grief and loss can occur prior to an amputation, after one, or at any stage during a person's life. It is important to realise that some people don't experience any grief or loss after an amputation, particularly if the procedure was made to resolve a problem (e.g. chronic pain or after many unsuccessful surgical attempts to save a limb).

What is grief?

Grief is a normal human response to losing someone or experiencing a traumatic event. People who have undergone an amputation, regardless of the cause, can also experience grief for the loss of their limb/s. Grief can also have a emotional impact on people.

Some people may grieve the loss of their limb for weeks or months, while for others the feeling of grief may last years; grief and has no set time frame. Grief can affect people in different ways and is individual to the person. Understand that the feeling of grief and loss is normal, try to be patient with yourself and allow yourself the time you need to grieve the loss of your limb and adjust to your 'new normal'.

How can grief impact my life?

Many people go through what are called the 'stages of grief'.

These can include:

- Denial
- Anger
- Depression
- Bargaining
- Acceptance

Stages of grief

Not everyone experiences each of these stages, they may only experience some of them, and not necessarily in a particular order. Working your way through a grief process is personal and individualised. Some people can feel stuck in some stages, while others move back and forth between stages during their recovery. As an amputee, it's important to remember that you are not alone.

Are there physical symptoms to grief and loss?

Grief can affect many parts of your life including your sense of self and your identity. Grief and loss can impact your relationships with others, your physical health and your emotions. You may find that your ability to sleep is affected (too much or too little sleep), your appetite changes, you experience physical pain and general discomfort, you have increases or decreases in body temperature, or other physical changes.

How can I seek support?

If you are experiencing the physical and emotional impact of grief and loss following your amputation it is important to talk to a member of your healthcare team or your local doctor. You may like to speak to a trained counsellor to help you deal with your emotions. Your doctor can assist you with arranging a 'mental health care plan' and refer you to a healthcare professional, such as a psychologist. Visits to a healthcare professional can be subsidised via Medicare or sometimes through private health insurance companies. Talk to the people in your life about how you are feeling. Stay connected to your friends. Share your thoughts with loved ones as this will help you deal with the changes of how your body looks and feels.

What are some other ways of managing my sense of grief and loss?

Limbs 4 Life can arrange for you to speak with one of our trained Peer Support Volunteers or join a Peer Support Group. A peer is a person who is also an amputee and available to offer practical, social and emotional support because 'they've been there too'. You may also want to join Limbs 4 Life's online Facebook support group, where you can connect with other amputees across Australia.

Can I get some immediate support?

Moving through the grief and loss process may take time. If you, or someone you know, needs immediate support or is in danger contact 000. Or, if you are trouble coping with your emotions and want to talk to someone quickly you can contact:

- Lifeline
Call 13 11 14 or visit www.lifeline.org.au
- Beyond Blue
Call 1300 22 4636 or visit www.beyondblue.org.au
- Headspace (younger amputees)
Visit www.headspace.org.au to find your nearest headspace centre or join the online support service
- Sane Australia
Call 1800 18 7263 or visit www.sane.org
- Open Arms (veterans and families)
Call 1800 011 046 or visit www.openarms.gov.au

There is more information about support in the 'Mental Health Information Sheet.'

Making a real difference together

info@limbs4life.org.au 1300 78 22 31 limbs4life.org.au

This Information Sheet forms part of the Victorian Limb Loss Empowerment Project Toolkit.
This project is funded by the Australian Government Department of Social Services.